

Lace-edge collar

Lynne White

This lace-edged collar was worn by 17th century English gentlemen - and that was what inspired Lynne to make it. She brings it along when she volunteers at various reenactments throughout New England and New York. Lynne is active at Storowton Village on the Big E fairgrounds in West Springfield and enjoys making lace and demonstrating to the public. She is often accompanied by her husband, Harold - the local potter. They are both members of the Society of the 17th Century.
